21 September 1981

MEMORANDUM FOR: Tom Cormack, Executive Secretary

FROM : Ken McDonald, Chief Historian

SUBJECT : 1981 Annual Conference of the International

Institute for Strategic Studies

- 1. On Thursday through Saturday, 10-13 September 1981, I attended the 23rd Annual Conference of the International Institute for Strategic Studies. The theme for the conference was "America's Security in the 1980s," and attendance was limited to 250 members of the Institute, with approximately 150 from the United States and about 100 from some 28 other countries. There was an especially large representation from Great Britain, Germany, France and Washington. I shall attach a copy of the program and list of members of the conference. Although I attended openly under Agency sponsorship, I am listed as at the Naval War College, where I was when I applied to attend last May. In fact, a good many of the titles and organizational identifications on the program seem to be out-of-date. The only other person attending from the Agency, so far as I know, was Harry Rowen from NIC.
- 2. All of the conference's activities took place at the Williamsburg Hilton and National Conference Center (which is part of the hotel). Conforming to long-standing IISS practice, the proceedings were off the record. Two discussion papers for each of the five committees and the opening address by Barbara Tuchman were circulated to the members, but there were no papers for the addresses by Caspar Weinberger or Henry Kissinger. In due course the Institute will publish some of the papers and proceedings in its Adelphi Papers series.
- 3. The program was organized into three plenary sessions, a panel discussion on U.S. strategic commitments and capabilities, and three sessions of committee discussions. Paul Nitze substituted for William van Cleave in the panel discussion, where former DCI Stansfield Turner also spoke effectively as panelist. Of the three addresses to plenary sessions, Dr. Kissinger's was most successful, Mrs. Tuchman's less so, and Mr. Weinberger's not really entirely suitable for this particular audience. It was, however, very good of the Secretary of Defense to keep his commitment to speak at the Friday afternoon plenary session, right in the midst of the defense budget cut flap.
- 4. The members of the conference were divided into five committees, whose chairmen, discussion topics and principal papers are listed in the printed program. I was a member of Committee 3, "The Super-Power Relationship," chaired by Michael Howard, Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford. Other U.S. members of this committee included Robert Bowie, McGeorge Bundy, Samuel Huntington, William Hyland, Paul Nitze, Edward Rowny, Stansfield Turner and Albert Wohlstetter. Benoit d'Abouville, of the French Foreign Ministry, commented on William Hyland's sound but conventional paper, "The Soviet Union in American Perspective: Perceptions and Realities," while General Rowny was commentator for Pierre Hassner's excellent and provocative paper, "American Policy towards the Soviet Union in the 1980s: Objectives and Uncertainties." The committee discussion was well-informed and generally interesting, but rather diffuse. Although there were a lot of set-piece comments that went on too long, there were also some very lively exchanges. It was illuminating to see some of these notables in action in the committee, as well as to meet and talk informally with such a wide range of political, official and academic members over the three-day meeting.

5. In the final plenary session Sunday morning Christoph Bertram, Director of the IISS, gave a brilliant summation of the entire proceedings, finding rather more continuity and cohesion in the addresses, papers and discussions than I had observed; his admirable synthesis will also be published in the conference proceedings.
